HAYES AND MUNDELEIN NAMED CARDINALS

PATRICK CARDINAL HAYES AND GEORGE CARDINAL MUNDELEIN

By United Press
Rome, March 21.—Patrick Hayes of New York and George W. Mundelein of Chicago became American prelates of the Roman Catholic Church today. At 10 A. M. Pope Pius XI conferred a solemn consistory on the elevation of the two American churchmen to the rank of cardinal. The pope then read the allocation setting forth the reasons of the church for honoring the United States. He paid a high tribute to American science and the support which American Catholics have rendered the work of the church. The solemn ceremonies of the consistory were private only high dignitaries of the church attending. The public consistory which hundreds of Americans will attend will be held Thursday in the vast spaces of St. Peter's.

The elevation of the two American churchmen increases the number of cardinals of the United States to four, giving that country four places among the nation's representatives in the Sacred College of Cardinals which ranks higher in the church hierarchy than the papal curia.

Here are Just a Few of the Many New "Leonard Cleanable" Features!

The "Leonard Cleanable" is lined with smooth, hard, one-piece porcelain with rounded corners—making it easy to clean.
Cold, dry air circulation is constantly maintained on highly scientific principles—assuring an evenly distributed temperature reaching every point in the provision chamber.
The shelves are made of open woven wire mesh—heavily retinned and placed on aluminum pegs—permitting a free, unhampered circulation of dry, cold air.
The drain pipe and trap is located where it is easily accessible—but not in the way. It is made of non-rusting material and lifts out easily for cleaning.

Ten heat-resisting walls of insulation keep the cold air in and the warm air out—insuring the greatest possible economy of ice consumption and the utmost efficiency of satisfactory operation.
The porcelain lining comes way to the edge of the outside door frame—leaving no wood exposed anywhere on the inside.
The ice rack is made of heavily galvanized iron. Will not rust or leak and sets well down in the ice chamber—out of the way.
The door sill and the floor of the provision chamber are perfectly even—thus making cleaning much easier than where the floors are sunk below the door sill.

S. S. Say what you will, I never knew such startling results were possible. Well, folks, behold me knocking out my rheumatism! I gave me back some of the strength I used to have way back. ROTARIANS OF
33RD DISTRICT
MEET THIS WEEK

Members of 40 Clubs to Gather in Pittsburgh for Annual Conference.

WOMEN WILL BE GUESTS

PITTSBURGH, March 24.—Members of the 40 clubs of the 33rd Rotary District, comprising Western Pennsylvania, are gathering here this week in what promises to be the largest conference ever held by Western Pennsylvania Rotarians. The Pittsburgh club is host for the first time in the 12 years since the formation of the district organizations and has made exceptional efforts in the preparation of a program of special interest to members of Rotary International.

John J. Gibson of Toronto, Can., vice-president of Rotary International, is the headline speaker at the conference, which opens on Wednesday, March 26, and ends here Friday. Active in preparations for the three-day session are Edwin C. May, former district governor and now chairman of the conference committee, Fred Sover of Butler, the present district governor, A. W. Smith, Jr., immediate past governor and member of the Board of Rotary International, and Bert H. Meyers, president of the Pittsburgh club. Business methods is the central theme of the conference. Hundreds of out-of-town Rotarians will spend the three days in Pittsburgh, having headquarters at the William Penn and Fort Pitt hotels. All business sessions of the conference will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, while the two big downtown hotels named will contain conference headquarters, and will be used for the social events. The principal event of Wednesday will be the governor's ball given that evening in the William Penn Hotel. The annual district banquet will be held the following evening, while the daylight hours on Thursday and Friday will be devoted to conference sessions with luncheon each day at the Fort Pitt Hotel.

An equally attractive program, emphasizing features has been prepared by the wives of Pittsburgh Rotarians for the visiting ladies, of whom a large number accepted the invitation to attend. Luncheon, a card party, a theatre party, and trips about the city will supplement the ball and banquet in the ladies' schedule. Representatives will be present from every club in the district, while practically the entire membership of several clubs has announced its intention of attending the conference. An especial incentive for attending is the award of the governor's cup to the club which has the largest percentage of its members present in proportion to its distance traveled.

ROSENBAUM'S SPRING PAGEANT OPENS TONIGHT

Imported Models Will Display Latest Styles in Women's Wear at State Theatre.

WILL LAST THREE DAYS

This evening at 7:30 will see the opening of the Rosenbaum Bros. store's Spring Fashion Pageant, which is scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of this week. By staging it at the State Theatre, Uniontown, in the evenings, Rosenbaum Bros. feel that they are giving all the women of Fayette county an equal opportunity to view the newest creations of the spring season.

Many beautiful models have been specially imported for the occasion and special stage settings are being used, including a platform leading from the stage into the orchestra, upon which the models will promenade, so the audience can get a close-up of the garments worn. Nothing has been left undone to make this the most beautiful and effective presentation ever put on outside of the larger cities. There will be two performances nightly, 7:30 and 9:30, each showing the same garments, but there will be an entire change of program each evening. The merchandise used for display purposes is from the regular stock of Rosenbaum Bros. and will be on sale at the termination of the pageant.

Every phase of the new modes for spring will be shown—swimsuits, street and afternoon wear, dinner and evening wear, as well as juvenile modes. One model in particular will display exclusively the Irene Castle garments for which the Rosenbaum stores in Uniontown and Connelville hold the franchise.

The combined resources of the two stores in Uniontown and Connelville have been used to make this the finest and most representative fashion show ever put on outside of Pittsburgh.

The entire production is under the management of Murray Curdy, of Cumberland, who has had many years of experience in putting on style shows.

Whereupon the judge woke up, exclaiming: "Well, just a little; I like it fairly strong."

High School Annihilates Duquesne University High; Have Impregnable Defense

Cokers Simply Overwhelm Opponents With Showers of Field Goals.

FINAL RESULT IS 34-14

The Connelville High School basketball team, working as snappy as it ever did during the past season, Saturday night made the strong Duquesne University High School quintet "homewreck" in a very few minutes. The game had not advanced far until the Cokers had fully demonstrated they were complete masters of the situation. The final count was 34-14.

Starting off with cyclonic swiftness, the Orange and Black aggregation scored from the first tip-off. Eddie Niland coming in the initial goal. Others came in rapid succession.

When Duquesne did get hold of the ball their offense was short-lived. The visitors seemed unable to advance beyond the middle of the floor and their shooting from those "long distance" points was ineffective. The local defense was absolutely impregnable. When the half ended the score stood 17-2, a virtual white-wash.

This was kept up through the third period and then substitutions were made. At the close of the third quarter Connelville still had a wide margin, the score then being 28-6. In the final 10 minutes, with every man on the floor a second-stringer, the game was more even.

Niland had a "big" night. He scored six times from the floor and shot three out of three attempts from the foul line.

In a preliminary game the freshman team defeated the Senior quintet by a single point, 15-14. The Juniors and Seniors are scheduled to clash some time this week.

The lineup:
C. H. S.—St. D. U. H. S.—H.
Niland — F. — W. — W.
O'Donnell — F. — Savage
L. Rao — C. — Uhlir
George — G. — Cahalan
Welsh — G. — Murphy

Substitutions—Delegat for George, George for Delegat, Meyer for L. Rao, VanGorder, Wills for Trump, O'Donnell for Niland, Cahalan for W. W. W. for Cahalan, Basick for W. W. W. for Basick.

Field goals—Niland, 6; LaRue, 3; George, 2; Cahalan, 2; Wills, Welsh, W. W. W., Murphy.

Foul goals—Niland, 3 out of 3; O'Donnell, 2 out of 3; LaRue, 1 out of 4; Welsh, 2 out of 5; Basick, 1 out of 2; Savage, 3 out of 6; Murphy, 2 out of 3.

Referee—Wall.

NELSON GIRLS HAVE GAME ON WEDNESDAY WITH HOMESTEADERS

The Nelson Girls have a game scheduled for here on Wednesday evening, with the Library Girls of Homestead as opponents. The visiting quintet is considered one of the best in the Pittsburgh area and it is expected the Homestead play will be a close one.

In the preliminary Wednesday night, the Crescents, city Junior League contenders, will meet the Towns Five in the third game of an elimination series.

Contributions to Basketball Fund Are Still Coming

There are still a few contributions coming in for the purchase of the gold basketballs which will be presented to the Connelville High School basketball team. The sum is still lacking somewhat, however. It is the intention of the committee to get every "dollar" man a gold emblem, properly engraved.

Another former resident of this town, Eugene "Boss" Wagner, has sent in a money order for $1 to be added to the subscriptions. Writing to James M. Driscoll, sporting editor of The Courier, he says:

"Enclosed you will find a small contribution towards the fund for securing basketballs for the High School team—champion I followed with great interest their progress in the league and was very sorry to see they could not win further. Everybody should feel quite proud of it. I do not know any of the boys personally but always like to hear of the doings of C. H. S. although it has been a few years since I left there. I am personally acquainted with the manager of the H. S. faculty and Bascom of the Duquesne Township faculty. Remember me to my many friends in Connelville."

Wagner is now located at Carlisle, Pa.

NEXT CASEY-FRAT GAME WILL LIKELY BE THURSDAY NIGHT

Fans are waiting an announcement of the playing date of the next game between the Unity Fraternity and the Casey Club. There has already been three games played in the five-game series and two of these are held by the Casey quintet. That team expected to finish up with three in a row last week but were noed out by a single point in the final 20 seconds of play.

The next game will be even more hard-fought. The Fraternity needs another victory to even matters and after staying off annihilation in the series last week will endeavor to do this again.

It is likely the contest will be on Thursday evening. The Nelson Girls play Wednesday and the High School Friday, leaving only that night available. Positive announcement will be made tomorrow.

The biggest crowd yet is expected to attend the next game. Not one of the three played has been without its thrills and the pace is unusually fast for such teams. The keen rivalry existing between the outfit spurs the players on to greater than common effort.

Uniontown High Cannot Get Into State Tournament

Uniontown High School has been notified there is no chance for its basketball team to be included in the state tournament to be held at State College.

The P. I. A. A. official refused to overrule the W. P. I. A. League decision against the participation of Uniontown. The equipmenters are not members of the league and because they did not eliminate outstanding high school teams in this part of the state could not be considered.

"You may say I am a Casey fan. Yes, right you are and am pulling for them to win out, but they never can with that kind of officiating against them. Yet I will be the first one to congratulate the Frats if they win. If possible, cannot we have Wall finish the series? The fans of Connelville want this man Wall. Give us him as he not only is fair but he pleases by his hard work and these games need a referee."

"Hoping to read this in your paper I remain
A fan and a reader of the leading paper of Fayette county."

For the information of the fans who have been wondering why Wall has not "worked" the Casey-Frat games, the managements of both teams make a joint announcement that his services were sought but could not be secured. He had been scheduled for Friday night and although the date was accepted by him he later cancelled it. That night he handled a game in Uniontown between the High School of that place and South Brownsville.

A dozen local fans, including men who have been back of the Casey team in all the years it has functioned, have commended, and justly so, the work done by the Pittsburgh official in one game "back" ruled did the work single-handed. The absence of roughness, as compared with the opening clash when a Uniontown man had charge, was conspicuous. On Friday night the game was clean-cut.

In the words of Eddie Duggan, a Casey fan, who was present, it was "the cleanest, fastest and hard-fought independent game I ever saw." He also commented on the good work of the Snyder brothers. It is unreasonable to think that two men like "Bugs" and "Buck" Snyder, two of the leaders in Pittsburgh handling a game together, should let it "get away from them."

Another bit of interesting information to fans would be that the game was not held as closely as High School contests, where fouls are called even closer than they were Friday night. At that the officials called 20 on the Fraternity team and 25 on the Caseys. A few more than that would slow up the game and fans are demanding action from these teams.

Wall is desired but when in a key on Uniontown games someone else must be secured and the Casey management refuses to consider anyone other than Muley Bain of Uniontown, who has also been unable to come. Pittsburgh officials were brought here as the only solution to the referee question and with a resultant loss in money to both teams at every game.

THE ISLE OF DOUBT on view today and tomorrow at the Paramount presents Wyndham Standing. It is a story of romance and adventure told against a background of high society and a picture of primitive tropical life. She married without love. In fact it was arranged that she should marry this immensely rich man and then make his life so miserable that he would gladly divorce her and settle a large sum of money upon her. Each one could marry the person as much as she loved. But the husband feared of their little plot and he turned the tables. He tricked him on a his yacht and took them to a faraway tropical island where their primitive outdoor existence were off the superfluities of civilization and civilization and showed the depths and shallows of human nature.

Wednesday and Thursday through the story will be shown.

The Soisson

THE MIDNIGHT ALARM which is being shown today Tuesday and Wednesday at the Soisson under the auspices of the New Haven Hose Company shows one of the most spectacular scenes ever screened.

Shirley Carrington kills her partner Thornton who has made him executor of his estate. Through aid of Springer a servant the murder is pinned off as a suicide. Carrington forces Mrs. Thornton to flee his obnoxious attentions. She is killed at a railroad crossing. Her young daughter is picked up by a Mrs. Borg. Her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Tilwell as well as Carrington carry on an unceasing search for the lost child. Carrington finds her keeping a news stand with another wild Aggie. Chaser a young crook is in love with Sparkle as she is called. Carrington plots to destroy the papers which would identify the girl as the heir to Thornton wealth and takes the money as its own. The girl and Chaser are finally trapped with Carrington in a burning office building, when Carrington tries to get the documents from Sparkle (Carrington) and Springer die in the flames. Harry Westmore, a fire captain who had become enamored in Sparkle rescues her from the building, where she had been imprisoned in a steel vault. Sparkle is restored to her grandparents and the wealth due her. Chaser gives way to Westmore in his suit and turns his attention to deserving Aggie.

Thursday Friday and Saturday Harry Carey will be seen in 'The Night Hawk'.

The Orpheum

'PONJOLA' in which Anna Q. Nilsson in male role achieves one of the greatest successes of her career opened today at the Orpheum for a three day attraction. Those who read 'Ponjola' are going to be overjoyed with the screen version, for the producers of this picture have adhered faithfully to the plot and theme of the story and have given us a picture which can truthfully be regarded as one of the dramatic gems of the year. Miss Nilsson as the heroine of the play, the English noblewoman who disguises as a man, is admirably cast. Despite her essential femininity Anna is as much at home in male attire as she is in the clothes of her sex. The illusion is perfect and in those sequences of the story where she appears as a man one loses conscious awareness of the fact that it is a woman playing the part. James Kirkwood as Lund Drury the amblered Englishman who seeks to drown his sor-

19,275 School Children Of County Enrolled in The Junior Red Cross

A report has just been compiled of the Junior Red Cross enrollment in Fayette county for the present year. It shows 19,275 school children in Fayette county are members of the Junior Red Cross. This enrollment represents 431 school rooms and 139 schools. Every school room, whose pupils are enrolled in the Junior Red Cross, receives each month one or more copies of the Junior Red Cross magazine. As this publication contains many interesting stories, history and geography concerning many of the foreign countries where Junior Red Cross is also organized, teachers find it a valuable aid to their regular work.

Miss Helen N. Carroll, assistant county superintendent of schools, is chairman of the Junior Red Cross. Miss Carroll has built up the Junior enrollment to one of the largest of any county in the State and has created considerable interest in the organization, both among teachers and pupils.

The combined enrollment of senior and Junior members of the American Red Cross in Fayette county is over 31,000. One out of every six persons in the county territory is a member of the Red Cross. This is the highest percentage of Red Cross membership of any chapter in the State, and the Fayette county chapter ranks third in total number of members, being next to Philadelphia and Allegheny county.

BANDIT GANGS OF OKLAHOMA ARE WIPED OUT

With the Sending of Al Spencer's Fals to the Pen for 25 Years.

MANY DIE WITH BOOTS ON

By S. A. DANFORTH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 24.—Organized banditry has passed from Oklahoma.

Such was the comment of William (Bill) Tighman, veteran peace officer and bandit-hunter, after 25-year sentence in Leavenworth federal prison were passed out to six survivors of the Al Spencer bandit gang a few days ago.

Tighman spoke with finality, based upon more than 40 years' experience, in which he has witnessed the passing of four noted bandit gangs.

Bob Dalton leader of the Dalton gang, met death at the hands of the law at Coffeyville, Kan., in 1932, when the band of desperadoes were partially wiped out and the remainder imprisoned.

Bill Doolin, "King of Oklahoma outlaws," was killed near Lawton in the old Indian Territory in 1906, after his hand had been captured.

Starr Meek Death.

Henry Starr, who robbed more banks than any other outlaw in Oklahoma history, was slain while looting a bank in Arkansas in 1932. His associates separated and formed anew, according to officers under the leadership of Al Spencer with headquarters in the Oage hills of northern Oklahoma.

A charge of cattle rustling and a penitentiary sentence featured Spencer's first run-in with the law in 1919. As a "trustee," he walked out of the Oklahoma penitentiary at McAlester a few months later and started his picturesque career.

Bank robberies in Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas were credited to the "Spencer gang," while officers sought vainly for the "phantom leader." While officers sought him, Spencer was seen in a hotel lobby here. When officers arrived a few minutes later, he was gone.

A few days later he was seen in Wichita, Kan., but slipped back into northern Oklahoma, well ahead of pursuit.

Born near Nowata, Spencer knew the Oage country trails and hiding places, which were a mystery to outsiders.

Train Looted.

On the night of August 21 last, a M. K. & T. passenger train was halted in the desolate country near Okmus, Okla., and looted of more than $20,000 in Liberty bonds and currency, in genuine "wild west" fashion. While more than half a dozen bandits held passengers within the train and battered their way into the mail coaches, the gang leader, later established as Spencer, chatted unconcernedly with captive members of the crew upon current questions.

Fosses under direction of Alva McDonald, United States deputy marshal, closed in upon the Oage country and herded more than a score of suspects into the Pawhuska jail a few weeks later.

But Spencer's uncanny luck, which carried him safely through the encircling cordon, deserted him near the little town of Caney, Kan., where he walked into an ambush of a federal posse and fell riddled with bullets without returning the fire. Several thousand dollars in bonds, stolen from the "Katy" train at Okmus, were found upon his body.

Curtis Kelly, Spencer's right-hand man and confidant, confessed complicity in the Okmus robbery and gave testimony that sent five companions with him to Leavenworth.

Frank Nash, a pardoned "lifer," university graduate and lawyer, protested his sentence. The others passed uncomplainingly.

INSTALL WORLD'S BIGGEST DYNAMO

70,000 Times as Powerful as First One Built.

This electric age is the result perhaps more than anything else of the dynamo. The history of the development of the dynamo is one of the most interesting of the romances in the field of science. Not the least of the extraordinary features associated with its development is the long sleep which followed the discovery by Faraday, England's foremost man of science in his time, of a principle not therefore recognized, says the New York World.

In 1831 Michael Faraday, an Englishman, a pupil of Sir Humphrey Davy, while working in his laboratory engaged in experimental research, of a sudden discovered the law by means of which electricity could be created by mechanical process. Faraday made a report of his discovery and that report, of course, excited discussion, yet it was looked upon merely as an interesting discovery of a theretofore unsuspected natural law.

Future Not Foreseen.

No one at that time could see the wonderful growth in store for Faraday's little generator, or dynamo as it was then called. It was but 12 inches in diameter, most insignificant today when compared with the first of these gigantic generators just installed at the Niagara Falls power plant. Instead of 12 inches in diameter, this new "Titan of Niagara" has a rotor, or revolving unit, 51 feet in diameter.

Where Faraday's generator perhaps had a pull of but a fraction of one horse power, this new machine, designed and built by the General Electric company, will develop 70,000 horse power, or electricity, which is developed through the use of coal, and requires 70,000 tons annually.

Faraday's discovery slept about 30 years, although the scientists to have some crude and unsatisfactory attempts to make commercial use of it. Faraday himself made no attempt of that kind. He was purely and exclusively a man of research and science.

To Italy belongs the honor of having made such use of Faraday's discovery as to demonstrate the availability of it for creating electric energy by mechanical means. Professor Galvani, of one of the Italian universities, invented a machine by means of which the law that was discovered by Faraday was made commercially available.

Is Easily Obtained.

To the popular mind it is a problem to define the modern dynamo, or generator. The underlying principle is the rapid continuous change in the relative position of a lot of wires of copper and invisible magnetic lines of force. The existence of these lines of force was discovered by Faraday. The rapid whirling of the copper wires across the magnetic lines of force may be produced by a steam engine, by water power, or by any other means of affecting mechanical work.

In the dynamo electric energy is easily obtained by mechanical means. The mechanical means are represented by the rapid whirling of copper wires which are bound around a large tube or disc, in such manner as to bring the wires within the lines of the magnetism. It is necessary to set up a magnet the size of which increases proportionately with the increase in the amount of electric energy desired. For the largest dynamo a very large magnet is essential.

Faraday never discovered what that great force which we call magnetism really is. But for that matter, as Professor Steinmetz has often said, it can be said of electricity itself that while the world now understands some of the manifestations of electric energy and is able to manufacture that energy, no one has ever authoritatively stated what electricity really is.

All we know is, that Faraday's discovery of the law has made it possible to create electric energy in any amount through the operation of mechanical means. The mechanical means are themselves obtained either through the burning of coal, whereby a steam-driven engine whirled the copper wires, or by means of water power, as at the Niagara Falls electric plant.

Adequate Supply for Years.

The physical conditions existing at Niagara Falls are not duplicated elsewhere in the world. The immense drainage basin of the Great Lakes contributes an almost uniform outflow of water. The fact that the water is in constant motion and that the question of adequate supply is not one which need be considered for many years to come.

This continuous flow of over 500,000 cubic feet a second, finds its outlet through the Niagara river, which falls through a total height of 326 feet between Lakes Erie and Ontario. Of this 326 feet, 166 feet is concentrated in the cataract itself and another 55 feet is in the rapids. Immediately above, so that within a distance of one mile there is available a total head of 260 feet; or, combining the 54 feet of drop in the lower rapids with that above, there exists a head of 314 feet which may be developed within about five miles, distance being measured on the American side of the river.

This flow of water and the natural head available provide a source of power for over 4,000,000 horse power which, under ordinary conditions, one might expect would be used to the full for industrial purposes.

One factor alone has prevented the perfect working of economic law in this respect, and that factor is the value of the cataract and rapids from the scenic standpoint. That this value is a real one, no thoughtful person will deny. "Man cannot live by bread alone," and who can doubt that God who is the Father of the Father of the Father, intended it to minister to the spirit as well as to the body of man?

It is now beginning to be recognized that the division must ultimately be made at this point where the new total of human benefit shall be a maximum. And when that point is finally determined, the portion of the energy which is found not necessary to maintain the spiritual values will undoubtedly be made available for industrial purposes.

Use Niagara Power.

As early as 1725, near 150 years ago, a primitive sawmill made first use of Niagara power, and 100 years ago small waterwheels were used in mills along the upper rapids on the shore and small island of the American channel.

The beginning of the existing development may be placed as far back as 1852, when construction of a hydraulic canal was begun, extending from a point at the head of the rapids above the falls, now known as Port Day, to the edge of the gorge a mile below.

In 1875, however, an installation of 15 horse power under 25-foot head was made for driving a grist mill. It was not until 1890 that the first hydro-electric unit was installed at Niagara Falls. This comprised a waterwheel and brush dynamo and the electricity generated was used for illuminating fountains in the city's parks by means of two arc lamps. Recreations were run from various parts of the country to see the new wonder.

The second hydro-electric development and first commercial installation was made in 1895 on Bath Island. The generator of this unit with a capacity of 16 amperes at 110 volts was used for lighting a mill on the island. As soon as these early installations had demonstrated the possibilities of electrical power the real hydro-electric development began. This was in 1901, and there has been a gradual growth since that time.

A treaty between the United States and Canada limits the amount of water to be taken from Niagara falls for commercial purposes to 21 per cent of the total. This is now being utilized, 20 per cent on the American side and 11 per cent on the Canadian.

The demand for electricity has steadily increased, and to meet this, since no more water can be used, engineers began work on plans to use more efficiently the present water supply. Thus the idea for larger generators culminating in the world's largest machine recently installed.

More to Be Installed.

This new 70,000 horse power hydro-electric unit uses 3,000 cubic feet of water a second with an efficiency of at least 90 per cent. It does not increase the diversion of water in any way, but does materially increase the efficiency of conversion into power. It uses the same amount of water formerly used by seven 5,000 horse power units, and delivers energy equivalent to the output of 14 such units.

Two more units of the same size are being built and will be in use before the close of the year. This will add 100,000 horse power to the output of the Niagara plant without the use of any additional water, making a total output of 600,000 horse power generated by the American company, a record for hydro-electric systems in this country.

If this same amount of electricity were generated by steam it would require about 7,000,000 tons of coal a year.

The turbine of this 70,000 horse power unit is the highest power capacity water wheel ever built. It is a product of the I. P. Morris division of the Cramp Ship and Engine Building company of Philadelphia.

The water wheel is a single-piece steel casting weighing 104,000 pounds. The turbine casting and control valve required 32 castings of parts. The turbine converts the power of the falling water into mechanical energy, which is transmitted by means of the 12-inch shaft to the generator set directly above.

The gigantic generator establishes a new high mark in design and construction of electrical equipment. The rotor of the generator weighs 229 tons. The rotor with its 28 eight-ton poles weighs 280 tons. The revolving elements, consisting of rotor, shaft and runner, total approximately 500 tons and are suspended from the top of the unit by a Kingsbury thrust bearing.

One hundred and ten cars were required to transport the machinery and equipment comprising this 70,000-horse power unit.

New Pressure Tunnel.

The three new hydro-electric units will receive their supply of water through a new hydraulic pressure tunnel. The big tube, measuring 82 feet in diameter and 4,000 feet in length, carries the water from the head of the rapids above the falls under the city of Niagara to the edge of the high cliffs below the falls.

It was excavated through solid rock and the spoil removed would fill a train of gondolas reaching from Buffalo to Upton. The tunnel discharges water a great faraway, from which the water is conducted to the turbines by means of three 21-foot slope tunnel penstocks cut through the limestone cliff.

Alaska Fur Shipments Show Increase in 1923

Fur valued at $1,794,158 were shipped out of Alaska during the year 1923, according to a report received by the Department of Agriculture. The total number of furs shipped from Alaska during 1923 was 107,267. While this number exceeds that of the previous year by 2,040, the value is $1,127 less because of the lower prices paid for some kinds of furs.

As usual, the muskrat exceeded all others, both in numbers and in total value of skins, 410,611 of those having a value of $397,562 being the year's export. Next in order came the white fox, numbering 7,980, with a value of $207,470; the beaver with 14,841 skins, worth $258,188, and the red fox with 19,787 skins valued at $215,740.

The most notable decrease as compared with 1922 is the skin, 31,933 of those skins being shipped that year and 20,868 in 1923. The most notable increase is the red fox, 8,079 skins being exported in 1923 and 10,787 in 1922.

Washington Farmers Will Release Wheat

Farmers in the state of Washington, who still hold 50 per cent of the 1923 wheat crop of 85,000,000 bushels, are preparing to let go after holding since harvest for a higher price, according to reports reaching the wheat council of the United States. It is reported that one lot of 100,000 bushels of Washington grown wheat was offered on the February market. Sales of Canadian wheat at Vancouver for foreign account total 10,000,000 bushels for the season double the figure for last season at this date.

"Wanted" Men Hard to Find in the Far East

Major Bailey is wanted, the notice on the boarding told me, and instantly my mind flew back to a land where boardings are heavy with hollowed-out men who are never found. Every town in the East has a long list of men who are wanted for either the natives admit that no true criminal is ever brought to book, but that the police, to justify themselves, from time to time, make an innocent man pay the penalty of another's sin.

The fact is, of course, that the ordinary methods of detection as we know them in the West are useless in the East. Few there can read notices, even though they be printed in the vernacular of the populace, and so a crime punishes the streets with a little drum (followed by a rabble of archers) to tell them of the latest man who is wanted by the police.

The people come to their doors, and when the order has passed and the taps of his drums have grown faint they whisper among themselves. The chances are that they all know where the wanted man is hiding, but they are all resolved never to give him up.

Not all rewards in the world will make them tell the crime what they know, for the East is a land where vendettas still prevail and every native is aware that a man possesses power to still a crime after he is dead. So, after the order has passed, the criminal leaves his hiding place and moves on to the next township, toward the frontier where also he is sure of shelter and security.

Across the line he will be one of a hundred brigand bands that roam among the hills from Kashmir to Chinese Turkestan. There every criminal is beyond the arm of the law—R. J. Minney in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

Plant-and more Plant

During 1922 we added twenty millions of dollars' worth of equipment to our plant in Pennsylvania. Last year the figure was thirty millions. Those were record-breaking years. This year it will be forty millions. As far as we can see now, the coming five years will require about $173,000,000.

These figures are not of our making. The people of Pennsylvania by asking us for telephones—more and more telephones—are telling us how much new plant we must add.

Although the figures are large, we're in this business to give you all the service you need when you want it and where you want it.

That's why we're spending these millions of dollars in Pennsylvania.

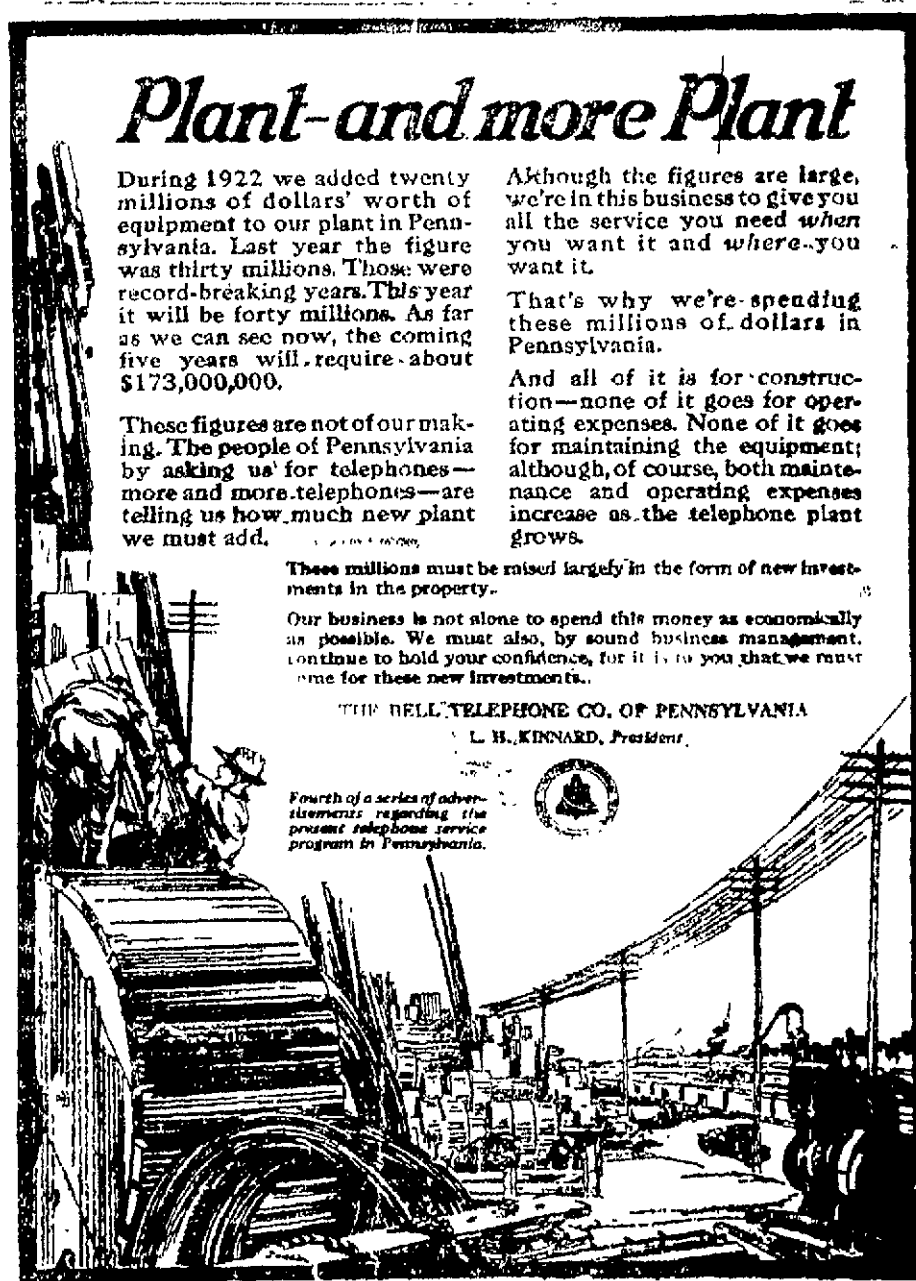

And all of it is for construction—none of it goes for operating expenses. None of it goes for maintaining the equipment; although, of course, both maintenance and operating expenses increase as the telephone plant grows.

These millions must be raised largely in the form of new investments in the property.

Our business is not alone to spend this money as economically as possible. We must also, by sound business management, continue to hold your confidence, for it is to you that we must come for these new investments.

Zen of the Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY ROBERT STEAD

Day by day the girl turned the situation over in her mind. Her life had been swept into strange and unexpected channels, and the experience puzzled her. She assured herself that she looked forward to her marriage with Transley with the proper delight of a bride-to-be, and indeed it was a prospect that could well be contemplated with pleasure. Transley had won the complete confidence of her father and when doubts assailed her Zen found in that fact a very considerable comfort. Y.D. was a shrewd man; a man who seldom guessed wrong. Zen did not admit that she was allowing her father to choose a husband for her, but the fact that her father concurred in the choice strengthened her in it. Transley had in him qualities which would win not only wealth, but distinction, and she would share in the laurels. She told herself that it was a delightful outlook; that she was a very happy girl indeed—and wondered why she was not happier!

Particularly she told it upon herself that she must now, finally, dismiss Denzilson Grant from her mind. It was absurd to suppose that she cared more for Grant than she did for Transley. The two men were so different; it was impossible to make comparisons. They occupied quite different spheres in her regard. To be sure, Grant was a very likable man, but he was not eligible as a husband, and she could not marry two, any case. Zen entertained no girlish delusions about there being only one man in the world. On the contrary, she was convinced that there were very many men in the world, and, among the better types, there was, perhaps, not so much to choose between them. Grant would undoubtedly be a good husband within his means; so would Transley, and his means were greater. The blue-prints of the new house in town had not been without effect. It was a different prospect from being a fortune-hunter's wife on a ranch. Her father would "love" her of it.

So she bustled her self with preparations for the great event, and what preparations they were! "Zen," her father had said, "for once the lid is off. Go to the limit!" She took him at his word. There were many trips to town, and activities about the old ranch buildings such as they had never known since Jesse Wilson came to finish Y.D.'s up-bringing, nor even then. The good word spread throughout the foothill country and down over the prairies, and many a lazy cloud of dust lay along the November hill-sides as the women folk of neighboring ranches came to pay their respects and gratify their curiosity. Zen had treasured to show which rent them home with new standards of extravagance.

Y.D. had not thought he could become so worked up over a simple matter like a wedding. There had deluded the edge of his eye, but even after making allowances he could not recall that his marriage to Jesse Wilson had been such an event in his life as this. It did not at least reflect so much glory upon his personality. He basked in the reflected glow of his daughter's beauty and popularity as happily as the big cat lying on the sunny side of the bunk-house. He found all sorts of excuses for invading where his presence was little wanted while Zen's finery was being displayed for admiration. Y.D. always pretended that such invasions were quite accidental, and affected a fine indifference to all this "women's fuss and feathers," but his attentions deceived at least none of the older visitors.

As the great day approached Y.D.'s wife shot a bomb-shell at him. "What do you propose to wear for Zen's wedding?" she demanded.

"What's the matter with the suit I wore to town?"

"Y.D.," said his wife, kindly, "there are certain little touches which you overlook. Your town suit is all right for selling steers, although I won't say that it hasn't outlived its prime even for that. To attend Zen's wedding it is hardly the thing."

"It's been a good suit," he protested.

"It is." "It is." It is also a venerable suit. But really, Y.D. will not do for this occasion. You must get yourself a new suit, and a white shirt."

"What do I want with a white shirt?"

"It has to be," his wife insisted. "You'll have to deck yourself out in a new suit and a white shirt and collar."

Y.D. stamped around the room, and in a moment slipped out. "All that nonsense," he confided to himself, on his way to the bunk-house. "It's all right for Zen to have good clothes—didn't I tell her to go to the limit?—but as for me, I ain't one of these gettin' married, is it? Standin' up before all them cow punchers in a white shirt! The bitterness of such disgrace out of the old rancher no less keenly than the physical discomfort which he forecast for himself, yet he put his own desires sufficiently to one side to buy a suit of clothes, and a white shirt and collar, when he was next to town."

It must not be supposed that Y.D. submitted to the salesman that he personally was descending to any such suit.

"A suit for a fellow about my size," he explained, "he's vettin' out at the ranch, an' he hefts about the same as me. Put in one of them Herford shirts an' a collar."

Y.D. tucked the package surreptitiously in his room and awaited the day of Zen's marriage with mingled emotions.

Zen, yielding to Transley's importunities, had at last said that it should be Christmas day. The wedding would be in the house, with the leading ranchers and farmers of the district as invited guests, and the general understanding was to be given out that the countryside as a whole would be welcome. All could not be taken care of in the house, so Y.D. gave orders that the hay was to be cleared out of one of the barns and the floor put in shape for dancing. Open house would be held in the barn and in the bunk-house, where substantial refreshments would be served to all and sundry.

Christmas day dawned with a seasonable nip to the air, but the sun rose warm and bright. As the hour approached Zen found herself possessed of a calmness which she deemed worthy of Y.D.'s daughter. She had elected to be unattended as she had no very special girl friend, and that seemed the simplest way out of the problem of selecting someone for this honor. She was, however, amply assisted with her dressing, and the choice of her fine dresses hurried deeper with the compliments to which she listened with modest appreciation.

At a quarter to the hour it was discovered that Y.D. had not yet dressed for the occasion. He was, in fact, engaged with Landson in making a tentative arrangement for the distribution of next year's hay. Zen had been so insistent upon an invitation being sent to Mr. and Mrs. Landson, that Y.D., although bearing a snub for his pains, at last conceded the point. He had done his neighbor rather less than justice, and now he and Landson, with the assistance of a well filled stone jug, were burying the hatchet in a corner of the bunk-house.

"Dang this dressin'," Y.D. remonstrated when a message demanding instant action reached him. "Landson, hear me now! I wouldn't take a million dollars for that girl, y' understand, and I wouldn't trade a money-egg for another."

So, grumbling, he found his way to his room and began a wrestle with his "store" clothes. Before the fight was over he was being reminded through the door that he wasn't washing a steer, and everybody was waiting. At the last moment he discovered that he had neglected to wash his shoes. There was nothing for it but his long ranch boots, so on they went. He sought Zen in her room. "Will I do in this?" he asked, feeling very sheepish.

Zen could have laughed, or she could have cried, but she did neither. She sensed in some way the fact that to her father this experience was a positive ordeal. So she just slipped her arm through his and whispered, "Of course you'll do, you sly old duffer," and tripped down the stairs by the side of his ponderous steps.

After the ceremony the older people sat down to dinner in the house, and the others in the bunk-house. Zen was radiant and calm; Transley handsome, delighted, self-possessed. His good luck was the subject of many a comment, both inside and out of the old house. He accepted it as his full virtue, and yet an one who has a right to expect that luck will play him some favors.

Suddenly there was a rush from outside, and Zen found herself being carried bodily away. The young people had decided that the dancing could wait no longer, so a half dozen lanterns had been deputized to burn the bride and carry her to the barn, where the brides were already strutting. Zen insisted that the first dance must belong to Transley, but after that she danced with the young ranchers and cowboys with stiffer impartiality. And even as she danced she found herself wondering if, among all this representation of the countryside, there was upon whom her thoughts had turned so much should be attending. She found herself watching the door. Surely it would have been once a decent respect to her—surely he might have helped to whirl her joyously away into the new life in which the past had to be forgotten. . . . How much better that they should part that way, than with the memories they had!

But Denzilson Grant did not appear. Evidently he preferred to keep his memories. . . .

When at last the night had worn thin and it was time for the bride couple to leave if they were to catch the morning train in town, and they had ridden down the foothill trails to the thunder of many accompanying hootchees, the old ranch became suddenly a place very quiet and still and alone. Y.D. sat down in the corner of the big room by the fire, and saw stranger pictures in its dying embers.

Zen! . . . Transley was a good fellow, but how much a man will take with grace a thank-you. . . .

Presently Y.D. became aware of a hand resting upon his shoulder, and feeling from its fingers this came something akin to the almost forgotten capture of a day long gone. He rubbed his great palm and took that slowly aging hand, once round and fresh like Zen's in his. Together they watched the fire die out in the silence of their empty house. . . .

CHAPTER X

Grant occupied himself with the work of the ranch that winter, spring and summer. Occasional news of Mrs. Transley altered through; she was too prominent a character in that countryside to be lost track of in a season. But anything which reached Grant came through accidental channels; he sought no information of her, and turned a deaf ear, almost, to what he heard. Then in the fall came an incident which immediately changed the course of his career.

It came in the form of an important-looking letter with an Eastern postmark. It had been delivered with other mail at the house, and Landson himself brought it down. Grant read it and at first stared at it somewhat blankly, as one not taking in its full import.

"Not bad news, I hope?" said his employer, clanking his civility in commiseration.

"Rather," Grant admitted, and handed him the letter. Landson read: "It is our duty to place before you information which must be of a very distressing nature, and which at the same time will have the effect of greatly increasing your responsibilities and opportunities. Unless you have happened to see the brief dispatches which have appeared in the press this letter will doubtless be the first intimation to you that your father and younger brother Roy were the victims of a most regrettable accident while motoring on a brief holiday in the South. The automobile in which they were traveling was struck by a fast train, and both of them received injuries from which they succumbed almost immediately.

"Your father, by his will, left all his property, aside from certain bequests to charity, to his son Roy, but Roy had no will, and as he was unmarried, and as there are no other surviving members of the family except yourself, the entire estate, less the bequests already referred to, descends to you. We have not yet attempted an appraisal, but you will know that the amount is very considerable indeed. In recent years your father's business undertakings were remarkably successful, and we think we may conservatively suggest that the amount of the estate will be very much greater than even you may anticipate."
